Tier

Tier airers can be assembled in one motion and have enough space to hang an everyday wash load of towels, T-shirts, shorts, trousers and delicates.

X Winged

Usually suitable for standing on a balcony, winged airers are great for drying delicates or small items on the flat sections, or bath towels on the well-spaced rungs of the wings.

Tower

These are generally taller and larger than most other airers. A tower airer is great for hanging double or king-size bedding, as well as heavy bath towels.

Bathtub

These are great for those with no floor space to spare. They're often winged to make the most of the space in a standard UK bath but can also have a smaller design and stand over the bath instead.

ECA-24 ◆

ITEM NO —
ECA-25 ◆

Radiator

Due to their small capacity, radiator airers are great for hand towels or dish cloths, or as a second smaller area when only one or two items need drying. Radiator airers are also handy if you need something to dry quickly.

ECA-26 ◆

ITEM NO —
ECA-27 ◆

Gated

A more simple design. Gated airers are popular among students as they're fuss-free and fold down to just a few centimeters' wide, meaning they can be easily stored behind a bed or wardrobe.

Key Features To Look Out For

Drying space or wash load capacity: This let you know how many meters of potential space the drying rack has to hang various items. Some airers tell you how many wash loads they can dry instead.

Hanging corners: These are a great addition to provide extra space for items to dry, with some airers able to hold up to four items on each corner.

Lock mechanism: This prevents a drying rack from collapsing if you're loading it with especially damp and heavy towels or jeans and keeps the frame safe around children, so if it ever gets knocked it won't accidentally fold down.

Fold down dimensions and floor space: Make sure you keep in mind the size of the airer when it's folded down. Most are compact and will take up minimal space.

Flexible setup: Look for ones with hanging corners, split racks, flat drying sections or multi-positional wings for the most flexible setup.
